Salumatics Chief Technology Officer Shawn Morrison earns AIIM Capture Practitioner designation

Mississauga, ON (November 17, 2011) – Salumatics Inc. is pleased to announce that a member of its executive team has been recognized by the Association for Information and Image Management (AIIM) with the Capture Practitioner (Capture^P) credential. Shawn Morrison, Chief Technology Officer at Salumatics' Mississauga corporate headquarters has earned the Capture^P designation following course work, practical application and examination.

The AIIM Capture Certificate Program covers global best practices for implementing capture, sharing data, managing information, assessing complementary technologies and leveraging industry best practices. AIIM is a non-profit organization focused on helping users to understand the challenges associated with managing documents, content, records, and business processes.

According to Allan Magnacca, President and CEO of Salumatics, "We're delighted with Shawn's accomplishment in earning this designation from AIIM, a respected and neutral organization. Their training on successful capture implementation provides a strategy and structure for how to scan and manage information. As a successful practitioner, Shawn has mastered this, and Salumatics' customers will continue to benefit from his expertise."
